AMERICA'S GREAT ARMADA BEFORE THE DOOMED CITY

Shafter's Army Reaches Santiago and Is Now Preparing to Land.

Spanish Forces Estimated at Over 30,000, and Terrific Fighting Is Looked For.

When the fleet of 25 transports with its freight of lighting men swept up the southern const today and slowed up, within sight of the doomed city of Santiago, the anxiously awaited solders were greated with ringing cheers, which faintly echoing to the transports from the decks of the blockading warships, far lushore, they were answered.

and a moment or two later he announced that a dozen or two transports were in sight. The news was exchanged from ship by ship, gladdening the hearts of the weary blockaders.

The auxiliary cruiser Gloucester, formerly J. P. Morgan's yacht Corsica, darted away to meet and welcome the troops.

AN IMPRESSIVE SCENE.

About half an hour later a grim forest of mass had sprung up, apparently from the sea, and a most impressive scene was presented as the armada swept up gracefully from the horizon, towards the shores where the great struggle is to take piece. The transports were ranged in three shifting lines, with the battleship Indiana on the extreme right, and the other menof-war on the outskirts of the fleet. In this order the transports and their escorts steamed slowly in toward the hills where Morro's red wails gleamed in the sunhight.

It was intended to take the entire fleet to the lines of Rear Admiral Samp.

HARD FIGHTING AHEAD. Wherever the landing may take place, the operations and the informaplace, the operations and the informa-tion of the last ten days shows conclu-sively that bitter work is ahead for Shafter's men before the Spanish flag comes down from Morro's walls. The Spanish infantry, cavairy and guerilla forces, estimated by Admiral Sampson today to number from 30,000 to 45,000 men are stretched from Guantanamo to Cabanas, a distance of 50 miles, and ready to concentrate at the point of attack. But starving and harassed by the insurgents, the situation of the the insurgeris, the situation of the Spaniards is desperate and naval officers familiar with the situation fully expect terrific fighting about Santiago. The best information obtainable is that there will be no attempt to make a general landing for two or three days, a general landing for two or three days, but small bodies of troops will be put ashore, probably tomorrow, at several points, both east and west of Santiago, including Acerraderos. This will give General Shafter an opportunity to become more familiar with the work before him, and to ascertain the best place for a general landing.

The interview closed with the understanding on the part of both generals that small bodies of troops are to be landed at once at several points along the coast, where they will be safe from attack by the Spanish, and these will be able to keep the enemy in doubt for the present as to their ultimate intentions. Among the troops that will be landed first are a number of men from the engineer corps, who will begin work at once preparing for the movement of the main body. Generals Shafter and Garcia will consult further tomorrow.

A GRAND ARRAY.

A GRAND ARRAY.

It was nearly dark before the officers returned to the Seguranca, and then she steamed back to the flagship and took up a position for the night. Before nightfall all the other transports and convoying warships had drifted nearer to the shore, and the Spanish soldiers watching from the bluffs on both sides of the entrance of Santiago harbor must have been impressed by the great array of vessels standing off-shore. There were nearly 69 of them, including the troopships and the menof-war comprising Rear Admiral Sampson's fleet and the squadron of Commodore Schley. The $,000 Spanish soldiers and perhaps 2,000 Spanish soldiers and perhaps 2,000 Spanish sallors guarding the city and harbor of Santiago de Cuba doubtless concluded that there was but a small chance of overcoming the force of American warships and some 20,000 American soldiers and sallors which will be hurled against them before the present week is over.

The dispatch boat of the Associated Press left the fleet for the cable station just at nightfall, when the warships had taken their positions in a semi-circle in front of the harbor entrance, with the troopships further out. The sea was comparatively smooth for the first time in several weeks, and the great fleet was almost motionless.

The soldiers, most of whom beheld the shores of Cuba for the first time in their lives, watched the steep mountain sides through the gathering darkness.

tain sides through the gathering darkness.

According to the naval regulations established at the outbreak of the war not a light was visible on any of the ships, and the cordon of men-of-war lying under the Spanish guns near Morro Castle kept up their vigil with more than usual care during the dark hours of the night to guard against approach of a destroying torpedo boat, which might attempt to run out of the harbor, and with one well directed shot sink a troopship in the depths of the sea and send the souls of those aboard into the realms of eternity.

The Cubans showered upon their distinguished visitors all the biessings of Cuba Labre for the assistance of the United States in the Cuban struggle for freedom, and they expressed the conviction that victory was at hand.

When the first curl of black smoke appeared on the distunt horizon, at noon, announcing the coming of the iong-expected soldiers, General Garcia himself, with the officers of his staff around him, stood on a hillside overlooking the sea and gave forth expressions of log as he watched the approach patch Boat Dandy, Off Santiago de

It was intended to take the entire fleet to the lines of Rear Admiral Sampson's fleet of warships, but an order from the admiral stopped the advance of the ships about 15 miles to the southeast, and, escorted by the Gloucester, General Shafter went forward on the Segurancia to confer with the sea while the plans were discussed by the leaders on board the flagship. Not the faintest intimation of their intentions regarding the landing has been allowed to escape. Undoubtedly, however, some of the troops will be landed at Guantanamo bay in order to relieve the marinest there, but it is generally believed the main body of the troops will be landed much nearer Santiago.

Secretary Bliss has addressed a letter to Senator Wolcott, giving an informal opinion as to the £30 expenditure required upon mining claims. He says that, while an expenditure of 290 in labor or improvements permits the claimant to occupancy for one year, $50 expenditure is required for continued occupancy, and enjoyment. While several claims in common may be embraced in the same application for patent, survey and notice, a single expenditure of £50 will suffice for but a single chaim. Whatever constitutes a proper annual expenditure under section £24 may unquestionably between the common section £40 may unquestionably the former is deemed to have been made upon each of several claims held in common when it is made on any one of them for the benefit of all, so under section £25 the expenditure will be deemed to have been made upon each of several claims held in common and included in one application for patent when it is made upon any one of them for the benefit of all, but the expenditure of money or labor must equal in value that which would be required on all of claims if they were separate or independent.
